Orange
The colour orange is symbolic of the Netherlands and comes from the name of the royal House of Orange-Nassau. During special occasions, such as King's day or important sporting events like the European or World football championships, the whole of the country becomes covered in orange flags and banners.

The iron chimney
This was the nickname of the Eiffel tower. The tower was built for the 1889 World's Fair. Many French people thought that it was very ugly, hence the nickname. The tower was supposed to be demolished after the World's Fair, but then everyone thought it was so nice that it was allowed to stay.
